Introduction

The Internationalization of education is a prime aim of international relations among higher education institutions. Still, it is not considered a goal but a means to improve and promote the quality of teaching, learning, and research.

The acquisition of knowledge, the mobilization of talent, the applied further research in AASTMT and with the Government and sharing of curricula among partner institutions and stakeholders are considered key advantages of higher education internationalization.

AASTMT offers undergraduate and graduate programs on issues such as sustainable urbanism, community development, housing, and architecture design with responses to the physical and social context and other courses which deal with sustainability.

Also, AAST not only supports the researchers in master and Ph.D. to have freedom in selecting their research points but also teaching techniques senior and junior academics can identify different teaching tools like simulation videos and practical training.

Policy Statement

AASTMT supports the supply of knowledge and the dissemination of practices to different users and communities of practice focusing on the implementation of urban policies that help to achieve SDG 11. The university, as well, is committed to contribute to the improvement of society through high quality education through offering undergraduate and graduate programs on issues such as sustainable urbanism, community development, and other courses, which deal with sustainability.

In addition, AAST encourages spreading justice and fighting corruption and bribery throughout the Academy. Also, AAST encourage justice among employees and students, particularly students with disabilities. It also supports the principles of academic freedom for both teachers and students in teaching, learning, and research, allowing them to freely choose their research topics.

Finally, AASTMT establishes key partnerships with national and international bodies to improve academic and quality norms. In addition to integrating into cooperation networks for education, training, and R&D, to increase the global visibility of AASTMT and the academic community.
